The City of Hope has begun resurfacing East Third street, eliminating a tourist hazard that has caused several accidents. There are other things about our town—about any town—that handicap us in presenting our best face to visitors, and in fact materially hurt us here at home. Once upon a time we had a City Planning Board whose job it was to think up things that were wrong with us, and figure out ways of correcting them. Your scribe was a member of that board. It's easier to write editorials. Editorials point out what's wrong—but planning boards have to find a remedy.

John L. Wilson to Be Candidate for Hempstead Judge

Has Long Experience in Handling County Affairs

A 20-YEAR RECORD

Thanks Voters for Past Support, Asks for Office Again

John L. Wilson, widely-known throughout Hope and Hempstead county politics, authorized The Star Thursday to announce that he would be a candidate for county judge in the coming August primaries.

Mr. Wilson needs no introduction to voters of this county, having entered the political arena 20 years ago in which he emerged victorious in every campaign since that time.

During his long career he has held various county offices, leaving a record which speaks for itself. In recent years, he turned from county affairs to run for state senator, was successful in his endeavor and served this senatorial district four years.

Mr. Wilson said that he would wage an active campaign for the office of county judge, and solicits the support of his friends and the electors of the county.

He issued the following statement: "After due consideration, I have decided to run for county judge of Hempstead county."

"This is a very important position to occupy as it has under its control the finance of the county in its various phases."

"My record in that position speaks for itself the eight years I was entrusted with its care."

"The roads and bridges I built and worked in practically every nook and corner of the county stand as evidence of what I will do should you again give me the opportunity."

"The record I have made as an official will be my reasons for asking you to return me to this office. It has been my pleasure to serve you in the various capacities you have entrusted to my care."

"Not one line of scandal has ever been lodged against my official record, and should I serve you another 20 years I feel sure that nothing will happen that will cause you any concern."

Vegetable Crop in State Is Improved

General Farm Work However, Is Two Weeks Behind

LITTLE ROCK —(AP)—The Little Rock weather bureau Wednesday reported improvement in all vegetable crops but said farm work in general was two weeks behind normal advancement.

The bureau blamed a "backward" season for the slow progress, reporting "little cotton was planted last week, and that which is up is making poor progress." The weekly review of crop conditions said corn fared slightly better than cotton and was making fair progress.

"Strawberries are blooming throughout the state but are ripening slowly due to cool weather," the report added. "Potatoes are looking good in most sections."

The bureau said work in the lowlands was delayed by flood stages on the lower White river.

"Oats, meadows and pastures made good progress, especially alfalfa," it said. "Tomatoes are being set and redishes are being shipped."

Democrat Outlines Liberal Program for United States

Would Attack Monopoly and Larger Wealth Groups

SMALL BUSINESS

He Would Exempt Little Business From U. S. Tax

This is the second of six articles in which leading presidential candidates tell John T. Flynn, noted economist and writer, how they propose to bring about recovery if elected.

By JOHN T. FLYNN
NEA Service Special Correspondent

Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana, is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for President. I put to him the question: "If you are elected what should be done to produce recovery?" Basing his answer upon the theory which is a correct one—that the revival of investment is essential to recovery, Mr. McNutt said: "The Number One obstacle to sound investment, I believe, is monopoly. The Number Two obstacle is lack of buying power in the lower two-thirds. "What we want, however, is not something that merely looks like investment. One way to get that would be to repeat what we did in the 'twenties, restore 'normalcy,' shut our eyes and buy every piece of paper offered. I believe such a speculative boom would collapse within a year or two with disastrous results.

"The harder way—but the better way—is to go on attacking real obstacles. At the same time we should go on using a part of our savings to increase national wealth and security in ways that create a minimum of debt."

I asked Mr. McNutt to state for me specifically the policies he would follow to do this.

Tax Revision Urged First "First of all," he said, "tax revision. I would reform taxes so as to discourage concentration and encourage buying power. I would urge reduction of sales taxes and nuisance taxes."

"I would exempt small corporations from federal taxation. I would continue the reciprocal trade agreements with care in particular agreements to protect agriculture."

"I would seek increased revenue from extension of personal graduated net income and estate tax rates instead of sales and nuisance taxes. I believe a shift from consumer to income taxes would largely reduce the need for relief spending."

"Second I would expand and consolidate services by which national savings are utilized to increase wealth and security and balance the economic system."

"Third, I mean I would expand the C. C. C., maintain our soil, water and forest resources and extend to the limit of profitable operation services such as education, health, scientific research, agricultural pest control—all of which are known to be highly profitable to the taxpayers."

"These operations are not only vital to our national security and national defense, but they tend to produce wealth."

Would Invest in Public Works

"Third, I would use federal money by making investments in public works. That would avoid overloading the local tax base as was done by the Republicans."

"I would maintain full federal control of these public works investments, but I would put emphasis on private contract work, free of means test for workers or other humiliating requirements."

"Fourth, I would continue reorganization of the services and departments of the federal government, with advanced standards of personnel and management in government."

"Fifth, I would extend old-age pensions on a 'pay-as-you-go' basis."

"Sixth, there are many and various readjustments in special areas of our society."

"I would use special devices to deal with these such as the National Youth Administration for our young people, work programs for unemployed."

Map of Nazi Hold on Norway

This NEA Service map shows graphically how the Germans have won control of Norway. Thursday's Associated Press dispatches quote the British as conceding to Germany all of Norway South of a line from Trondheim to the Swedish border, on the east. You will find Trondheim on the map this way: Run up the letters on the left side of the map until you come to "O"; then move to the right until you are under the figure "48". That locates Trondheim—and the Germans, at least temporarily, hold everything south of it. . . . Narvik, arctic port held by the Allies, is beyond the top limit of the map.

Presidential Elections

This being an election year, politics is among the most important conversational topics. Do you remember what happened at presidential elections not so very many years back? Try these true and false statements:

1. Herbert Hoover was opposed by Al Smith in 1928.

2. Theodore Roosevelt was the Republican party's candidate against Wilson in 1912.

3. Norman Thomas ran on the Socialist ticket in 1924.

4. The Democratic candidate in 1920 was Cox.

5. Charles Evans Hughes opposed Wilson in 1916.

Helena Citizens Fight Court Bill

Protest Against Bill for Removal of Court Site

WASHINGTON —(AP)—The respective merits of Forrest City and Helena were described to a House Judiciary Subcommittee Wednesday by attorneys of the two Arkansas cities.

The occasion was a hearing on a bill by Representative Gathings (Dem., Ark.) to remove the federal court for the Eastern Division of the Eastern District of Arkansas from Helena to Forrest City.

Gathings said he introduced the bill at the request of petitioning lawyers of the division, and preferred to have the committee determine the merits of the case.

Roy D. Campbell and R. B. McCulloch testified that 85 per cent of all lawyers practicing in the territory, except those living in Helena, preferred the change.

Attorneys Edwin Bevins and John C. Sheffield of Helena and Eugene Williams of the Helena Chamber of Commerce, protested that the needs of the district favored retention of the court there.

Now being tested in Italy is a mechanism that will enable the pilot of a transport plane to drop his passengers like bombs if danger arises. Safety hooks, working by an electric mechanism hold the seats and entire cabin. The passengers are supplied with parachutes; and, by moving a lever, the pilot releases the passengers from the cabin to parachute to safety.

British Bomb Stung Berlin —(AP)—The air ministry said Thursday that Norway's largest airport at German-held Stavanger was "bombed twice during daylight hours Wednesday, and this airplane, together with the airframes at Aalborg and Fornebu were heavily bombed during Wednesday night." The ministry said the British suffered no casualties.

Allied Battle Fleet Moves Into Mediterranean

LONDON — Prime Minister Chamberlain Thursday disclosed the withdrawal of British troops from the Andalus area and abandoning of the attempt to take German-held Trondheim from the south, but declared Britain would keep on fighting Germany in Norway, and refused to be trapped into letting down her guard in the Mediterranean.

"We have no intention of allowing Norway to become merely a 'side show,'" Chamberlain told the House of Commons.

He asserted the blows to the German fleet permitted "important redistribution of the main Allied fleets."

In Mediterranean

ROME —(AP)—The announcement that the British and French battle fleet was in the Mediterranean Thursday revived tension which earlier had been relieved by Italian disclaimers of any intentions of going to war immediately.

and announced that the British-French battle fleet is in the eastern Mediterranean on its way to Alexandria, Egypt.

A Welcome to the Month of May

Now the bright morning star, day's harbinger,
Comes dancing from the east, and leads with her
The flowery May, who from her green lap throws
The yellow cowslip, and the pale primrose.
Fair, beauteous May, that doth inspire
Mirth, and youth, and warm desire;
Woods and groves are of thy dressing,
Hill and dale doth boast thy blessing;
Thus we salute thee with our early song,
And welcome thee, and wish thee long.

Sharply Attack All Monopoly
"Seventh, meanwhile and always I would continue a frontal attack upon monopoly. Monopoly is the greatest foe of free enterprise. It is the negation of free enterprise. It is fatal to capitalism and to initiative. It is the straight road to a fascist dictatorship. In fighting monopoly I would enlist the co-operation of free business men who wish to remain free.

Here Is One of the Newest Ways to Fish

STAMPS, Ark. (P)—Small boys sitting quietly beside the Lake June highway, Burke investigated, found and dangling their feet in the water, aroused the suspicion of Game Warden Frank Burke.

Fishing being prohibited in the highway, Burke investigated, found each lad with a line and hook tied to a submerged toe. The warden made the youngsters release their catches, then sent them home with a warning.

Her Secret War Chest Now Totals 200 Millions

SERIAL STORY

BET ON LOVE

BY CHARLES B. PARMER

Copyright, 1939, NEA Service, Inc.

YESTERDAY, Wharton, who the horse, but Uncle Willie shows the claim and that of the other trainer were made in violation of Jockey Club rules. The horse is returned to Sherry. Later, Paul explains he was trying to save Pepper Boy for Sherry, began her to marry him now. She starts to answer.

CHAPTER VII

EAGERLY, Paul Wharton waited for Sherry to continue. "Yes, Sherry, go on."

But Sherry's sentence was never finished. At that moment a tall, thin chap, with a great mop of blond hair, stepped into the box. "Sherry Bond!"

"Sherry Grant! What are you doing here?" She jerked her hand free, grasped Grant's outstretched hand. Wharton looked up, making little effort to conceal his resentment. "My friend, Paul Wharton, Sherry. This is Sherry Grant. Sit down, Sherry."

"Swell colt you've got, Sherry," Grant was saying. "He's got everything. And can he run! And Madden—I couldn't have ridden Pepper Boy much better myself. I intended offering, but I couldn't make it in from Chicago in time."

"Since when have you been riding on the flat?" Wharton asked. "Thought you were the white-haired boy in steeplechasing."

"I do ride over the sticks," Sherry Grant answered nonchalantly, his eyes never leaving Sherry's face, "but I'm light. Going to ride on the flat this season, too. But say, Sherry, about the Derby."

"Paul was just speaking of it," she said, tonelessly. "Yeah? About Pepper Boy? Say—heard there were a couple of claims—did you lose him?"

She shook her head. "Paul says he was ready to save him."

"That so?" The intruder looked suspiciously at Wharton. The latter ignored his glance.

"Paul advised me twice not to start the colt in a claimer. When I did, he tried to claim him for me. He—and the other fellow—both lost on technicalities."

"Let me get this straight," the rider looked from Wharton to Sherry. "He was going to let you buy him back, at the claiming price?"

"Yes."

The blond chap whistled—softly. And grinned. Sherry saw Wharton's face turn a fiery red. She looked at the second man. "Sherry Grant, what's up?"

"Not a thing," he said with an exaggerated drawl, "not a little thing. But you ought to bone up on claiming rules, before you fall for bedtime tales."

WHARTON was on his feet. He said in low tones: "You might explain that—and you might explain where you come in on this."

"I come in right here, fellow," Sherry Grant got to his feet, faced Wharton. "Maybe that's business, Wharton—you're a whiz at business; but racing's something else again."

Sherry's voice rose insistently. "Please explain, Sherry."

"Nothing special to explain," he turned to her. "But you should know that no horse claimed can start in the name of its former owner till 30 days have passed—and 14 days from today the Kentucky Derby is run. Seems as if Wharton was going to be in the Derby—with Pepper Boy carrying his colors. Later, the colt might run in yours again."

"You may know racing," Wharton's voice cracked, "but you've got a lot to learn about human nature. My colors are going to be in the Derby, carried by Red Soldier, the only colt of real Derby caliber on this track—as you'll see when the Handicap is run. He's going to spread eagle that field. I don't need Sherry's colt—and if I did, I haven't sunk that low. He turned his shoulder, then spoke over it to the gentleman rider, "Good day, Grant."

GRANT stood there for a moment, reddened from top of soft collar to edge of his fair hair, then quickly turned and left the box. Sherry, over Paul Wharton's shoulder, watched him move off in the aisle crowds.

"Paul," she asked, "is it true—what Sherry said? That I couldn't buy the colt back in less than 30 days?"

"You could buy him back the next minute—but you couldn't race him until 30 days passed."

"I see." She glanced out toward the track, where a field was parading to the post. "Paul, then the colt couldn't—"

He broke in, sensing her question. "The colt would have run in your name, silly." He spoke the words lightly.

"How could he?" she asked, a cloud gathering in her face.

"Silly!" he repeated, as if to a child, "He'd have run in the name of Mrs. Paul Wharton, of course!"

"Oh, oh!" she repeated, eyes focused on his face. "How very sweet of you! Using my Pepper Boy as a sort of bribe—to get me to marry you!"

HOT tears burned Sherry's eyes as she hurried through the crowd to the big man standing at the rail.

"In the paddock, they say Red Soldier's a standout—yet he's not even favorite—maybe he's just Wharton's putting over a good thing... wish I knew."

"He told me just a minute ago," Sherry said before she thought, "that Red Soldier would spread eagle his field."

"He did, eh?" Uncle Bill lowered his glasses, asked in a flash: "How'd he say it—bragging, or serious?"

"He—why—" Sherry tried to reconstruct the mood of the moment. "I guess it was bragging in a way; but if his colt doesn't make good—well, he's laid himself wide open. And to a man who'll jeer plenty at him."

Willie Bond considered the matter for all of three seconds. Then went into a trance. "My dear, hold these glasses—hold my place—Business, my dear, business—be back in a moment."

THE horses were at the post when he returned. Red Soldier, in the light green and cherry red blocks of the Wharton Stable, was cutting up at the post—the starter was placing him outside.

"They're off!" the crowd yelled as the field sprang forward on the backstretch. Sherry saw the green and red shoot to the front—the jockey was cutting across to the rail—he had stolen the start—he was three lengths ahead!

The rest of the race was a blur to Sherry. The horses swung into the stretch, a spot of green and cherry in front. Then she saw something yellow and black leap out from the pack of horses behind. Now two horses were fighting it out, down that short stretch.

Willie Bond seized Sherry's arm in vise-like grip. He was screaming in her ear: "Now's the time to make his run—come on, you rascal! Come on—don't let us down—turn him loose—let him run, you fool!"

The jockey on Red Soldier, as if he heard, lifted his reins, flung himself forward, began hand-riding his mount; pressing hands against the colt's neck—urging him on. A hundred feet from the wire the challenger came alongside—running fast. Then the bay leaped forward as if lashed from behind—in two mighty strides spurred a length ahead—swept under the wire—winner, going away!

"M word! What a colt!" Willie Bond exclaimed in awe. "The boy never touched him with a whip, either. And look!—the time of the race was going up on the board—'He's equalled the track record!'"

Rich Texas Oil Man Provides Sandwiches

EL PASO (AP)—If loungers in downtown San Jacinto plaza looked hopefully toward a plaza hotel Wednesday, there was a reason.

Tuesday, it became known, a Paul Worth oil man stood sandwiches for every park bench occupant.

The oil man—who asked his name be withheld for reason—looked from his hotel suite upon the plaza below, and called Maitre d'Hotel Joe M. Nitzsche with following instructions:

"Go down there and see how many thing the party has been up to is due to the committee's conviction that for many years the Communists got altogether too many favors from the New Deal. Chairman Dies has been given some pretty amazing tips and leads; the Communists' 1-won't-talk tactics are keeping him from following through on them."

From his hotel window the big oil man watched while starchy waitresses passed trays among the gaping, but not reluctant, loungers in the park.

"Have a sandwich, sir? Ham and cheese, peanut butter and jelly. It's on the house."

Not a sandwich came back. There was no tipping.

Ruling Is Given on Legal Advertising

LITTLE ROCK (AP)—A newspaper printed in one county and distributed from its own place, of business in another county may publish legal advertisements for the county of distribution Attorney General Jack Holt ruled Wednesday.

The question was raised by a county newspaper publisher in a letter to Secretary of State C. G. Hall who referred the matter to Holt.

Holt said the issue had been settled by the supreme court in two cases and that "the place where paper is printed is not material."

"It may be printed in any county or even outside the state," is published by distribution in county affected and shows evidence of publication on its face."

Cut in Research May Crush NLRB's Steel Victory

WASHINGTON — Unless Congress changes its mind and restores to the Labor Board's appropriation bill the $45,600 which was to have paid the board's research division next year, the famous finding in the "little steel" case may fall to the ground of its own weight.

This was the biggest case the board ever handled. The finding, just upheld by the Supreme Court, directs reinstatement and back pay for thousands of former Republic Steel strikers. But if the research division does not get its money, there will be a big hitch.

The job of seeing that the finding is put into effect is enormously complicated, and it's the research division that has to do most of it. It plans to open five sub-regional offices and take on extra help, and figures the job will take all summer. But the next fiscal year begins July 1, and as things are now, the division's money will then be cut off.

Claims Must Be Sifted

Practically all of the strikers have been rehired by Republic, but the board claims lots of them got poorer jobs than they used to have despite its ruling that the jobs must be "substantially equivalent" to the old ones. So, for one thing, an intricate bit of job-analysis must be done for hundreds upon hundreds of individuals.

Beside that, there's the back pay.

Someone has to figure out who gets it, and how much. Close to 10,000 men are expected to apply.

If the research division is crippled, there won't be anybody to do this job. For that matter, the "little steel" case probably wouldn't have been won in the first place without the division's work.

Murphy and Jackson not Too Cordial

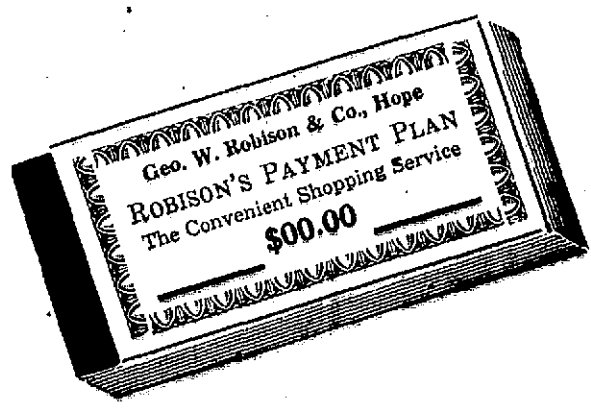

Attorney General Jackson and his predecessor, Supreme Court Justice Murphy, never were exactly Damon and Pythias. They've been even less so since Jackson took over Justice Department.

Latest indication of this came when Senator Tolley accused the department of drafting a bill to make secret census data available to the FBI and to army and navy intelligence outfits. Jackson immediately pointed out that Justice had merely drafted the bill at an unnamed official's request; then he added, tartly, that anyway it was done under Murphy, and that the bill "is not in accord with the present policy of the Department of Justice."

Thing to remember about present legal scrap between Communists and the Dies committee is that the party really in the middle is the New Deal itself.

A good part of the committee's effort to lay bare party membership rolls and get a full story of every-

58th Birthday Sale Kroger Company

"Insured Savings" Is Theme of Company's Sale

Drawing a parallel between progress of the food industry and the life insurance business, executives of the Kroger Grocery and Baking Company have selected "insured savings" as the central theme of the company's 58th Birthday sale now in progress.

They pointed out that when the Kroger company began with one small store, more than half a century ago, life insurance occupied a position of relatively little importance in the business world. At that time there were but 30 life insurance companies, with many of their agents writing policies as a side line while working at another profession or trade. Today, 375 companies in this field employ some 260,000 well trained men and women as agents and in home and branch offices.

Life insurance in force in 1880 amounted to $1,000,000,000, not an insignificant sum (1911) a comparison is made with the $110,000,000,000 worth in force today. Sixty years ago virtually all policies were written on the ordinary life plan; now there are approximately 100 forms from which to choose. Since the turn of the

Insurance Theme of Sales Event

With insured savings the theme of Kroger's 58th Birthday sale, now in progress, Miss Ruth Pilon, Cincinnati beauty, turns the pages of this gigantic insurance policy and officially opens the grocery firm's merchandising event.

century, the number of policyholders has increased from 8,000,000 to 70,000,000.

This parallels the growth of the Kroger company from the one small river-front store in Cincinnati to hundreds of modern food markets throughout the Middle West and South. A typical Kroger store in the '80s handled a limited variety of canned goods, fresh fruits and vegetables only during the short summer season, candies, tobaccos, and such household supplies as wash boards, tubs and brooms. Today an average Kroger food market sells no less than 3,000 different items over its spotless counters.

Early life insurance policies would seem strange to a policyholder today. They had no cash values, no loan privileges, no provisions for change of beneficiary or conversion, and premium payments were on an annual basis only. In addition, there often were severe restrictions as to occupation and residence. For example an insured might not travel south of Virginia and Kentucky between the first of July and the first of November without special permission.

Charged with safeguarding the purity and quality of products sold in Kroger stores is the Kroger Food Foundation, an independent research organization in Cincinnati, staffed by food chemists, home economists and other research experts.

Currently Kroger stores are observing their 58th anniversary with a birthday sale during which "insured savings" is the theme employed. Kroger brand items featured during this event bear the Food Foundation's Seal of Approval, awarded by this scientific organization only after products have been tested thoroughly and approved.

Although work of the Food Foundation has been especially highlighted during the anniversary sale, the organization maintains a day-by-day check on the quality of all items sold in Kroger stores.

Last year the Food Foundation staff worked on more than 750 specific projects, completing careful research studies, or developing products on which suggestions had been made by customers, store personnel or by the Kroger manufacturing department. During the same period, 21,500 routine tests were completed, including sampling products from shipments of goods to branches of the company and inspecting samples taken from production lines of Kroger manufactured items.

However, the Foundation does not confine its experimental and development work to Kroger-manufactured goods. Frequently it works with other manufacturers who are eager to improve their products.

In the 38-years reign of Henry VIII of England 72,000 criminals were executed.

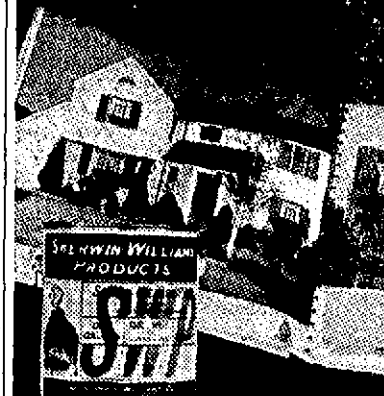

Military engineers were formerly called trench-masters.

32,000 Acres in Soil Experiment

Texans Have the Largest of 170 Soil Projects

AP Feature Service
TEMPLE, Texas — Wind, sun, rain and the things of the earth are mingling in a huge "test tube" near here, working out an experiment that holds important implications for the entire cotton South.

For it is in the North Elm Creek watershed that the U. S. Soil Conservation Service has located the largest of its 170 demonstration projects.

if it's HANES!
WE HAVE IT!
TALBOT'S

The biggest contiguous block of conservation-treated land in the country, 32,000 acres, has been formed out of 167 farms. Four hundred and fifty other farmers with 51,000 acres are cooperating in the experiment. And the results are sufficient to make the Soil Conservation Service point with pride.

Plowed Up the Grass
Beginning in 1936, when Texas became a republic, thousands of farmers flocked to the 3,000,000-acre Texas Blacklands to raise cotton. They rooted out the native grasses and plowed the land in up-and-downhill furrows. As rains washed away, whole sheets of top-soil, the cotton yield declined. Then, in 1933, a conservation project was started in the Elm Creek district, where 75 per cent of the land was in cotton.

Now the soil conservation reports:
1. The acreage devoted to cotton has been reduced to 35 per cent of the cultivated land.
2. Eroded land has been placed under a protective grass cover.
3. There has been an increase of 15 per cent in livestock—cattle and sheep—because now there is feed and forage.
4. Almost 6,000 eroded acres, formerly in clean-tilled crops or lying idle, have been converted to pasture.

5. Over 1,000 acres of permanent grass meadows or meadow buffer strips protect 4,000 acres of cultivated land.

They Follow 'Round' Farming
And, most important, "round" farming has displaced "square" farming, in which furrows corresponded to boundary lines no matter how the land sloped. Today, on 32,000 acres, the rows wind around the slope on the contour or level, regardless of boundary lines. Between the intervals of open-row crops lie strips of fibrous-rooted plants such as small grain, sorghums, or udon grass. Thus, runoff water from the clean-tilled rows is filtered of any soil it may be carrying.

The pastures are contour-furrowed and contour-ridged to hold back the water. While boundary markings are retained, the furrows and strips move from field to field as required by good conservation practice.

The Soil Conservation Service at Fort Worth reports that farmers outside the Elm Creek area, having seen the success of the project, are now petitioning for the formation of a district covering 750,000 acres. It says that, with modifications, the pattern established at Elm Creek is applicable to the whole cotton South.

Iceland's parliament, the Althing, boasts a past of 1010 years. And knows how it feels, no doubt, to be as old as the hills.

A Senator Spills Beans to Barber

Jack Stinnett Reports Mythical Conversation

By JACK STINNETT

Washington—Capital barbershop: Barber: Good afternoon, Senator. Looks like spring's here.

Senator: May be. Leave it long. Got to go back home and make a speech next week. Don't want the folks to think I'm trying to be another political gladiator.

Representative (from next chair): Heh, heh. Howya, Senator. What you got against gladiators?

Senator: Not a thing, not a thing. But one in the limelight in each party is enough.

Barber: You mean McNutt and Dewey?

Senator: Know anyone else who could wear that shoe?

Barber: Well, I guess. . . .

Rep.: Sal, what a race for the ladies that would be—McNutt vs. Dewey. Any chance of such a thing happening, Senator? How about a little round-up on the way you see things now. What happened to that so-called Roosevelt-Farley split? How about Taft dodging Dewey in Maryland? How about. . . .

Sen.: Who! One thing at a time, congressman. There's always a chance of anything happening in politics. You know that McNutt's still in the running. If he comes out of that Indiana business with his boots shined and no mud on his britches, he will be somebody to figure with. The boys who are really practical about this thing, think a McNutt-Farley ticket would be the biggest vote-getter the Democrats could put in the field—that is, if, of course, FDR steps down.

Rep.: But would Farley take. . . .

Sen.: Not only would; but will. I don't care what Jim says, I'll bet a hat that's not in the ring he's playing for second place. Why, you back there months ago, when he made a junket to the west coast and talked to old political cronies along the line, they told him. I know that. And he's too smart not to know they know what they're talking about. What Jim's counting on is staying in politics and in front line of the Democratic party. . . . no matter what the Chief does. That's the reason.

Only thing that worries the Brothers Warner a little is that about 30 per cent of the "treasures" anecdotes about Rockne have been omitted. Otherwise the feature would have become a series. Hundreds of people have offered material and dozens have tendered their personal services to help in preparing the story.

O'Brien Takes Part of Rockne

The appearance of Pat O'Brien as Rockne will be downright startling to everyone who remembers the often photographer, broken-nosed pan of old Knute. As one who has the highest regard for O'Brien's ability, I still have been a little too aware that in recent pictures he was playing himself, just as Spencer Tracy does. But in this one, O'Brien is Rockne.

He took off 25 pounds to fit the role. The makeup people have filled up the chin cleft, built out his forehead along the eyebrow line, and broadened and apparently broken his nose.

These effects are attained by plastic rubber inlays so perfectly joined that they're undetectable even by an interviewer. Watching their removal is a shuddery experience like a major but bloodless operation. When Pat's small son witnessed it, he kicked Pere Westmore's shins and yelled, "Stop tearing my daddy's face!"

Thoughtful precautions were taken to prepare Mrs. Rockne for her first glimpse of O'Brien in makeup. The actor (wearing his own face) was introduced at a dinner party. Later, when they were acquainted, he took her aside and showed her a lot of photos of the step-by-step makeup process and a set of comparison stills of himself and Rockne.

Even then she had quite a shock next day when she visited the set and saw O'Brien making love to Gale Page, who plays the wife in the picture.

Miss Page, incidentally, lost plenty of pounds to become as slim as the girl who married the young chemistry teacher.

O'Brien Feels Deeply About Role

O'Brien is full of Rockne: love and like to tell it. The depth of his feeling about the role gives an impression of a sort of mystic kinship; certainly it is a stronger thing than have ever encountered in Hollywood. Also he's the first star I've seen who so wholeheartedly welcomed suggestions on how to do his acting. After a classroom scene he told and showed me some of the ways in which Mrs. Rockne has corrected his original interpretations—tricks of speaking, wisecracks, little mannerisms and attitudes which should mean a lot to all the people who knew or studied under her husband. Equally important is the confidence that such details are right.

It's a Harvard historian who predicts the U. S. will be drawn into the war by a German invasion of South America. Now if he only has a good lip on the fifth at Hialeah.

Under way in the U.S. is a "Stop Dewey" movement among Republicans. This, just a year after Europe was attempting a similar curb against a man with a mustache and ambition to get ahead.

HARRISON IN HOLLYWOOD

By PAUL HARRISON
NEA Service Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD — The more I see of this Knute Rockne picture and its people, the easier it is to understand the studio's enthusiasm for it and the atmosphere of reverence that hovers around the set.

For one thing, this isn't a football picture. Rockne may be first remembered as a great coach of Notre Dame, but he was mostly a teacher—not only of chemistry but of character. And the story has much of the mood of "Mr. Chips."

For another thing, this probably is the first accurate biography ever filmed. Not only are there none of the outrageous distortions of essential fact and characterization which you have found in previous Life-of-So-and-So flickers; there is—according to Mrs. Rockne, Notre Dame officials, Rockne friends, researchers and writ-
